

Test Harold Garfinkel Menno Meyjes 15.2.1985

<page>On the very serious and consequential matter of the priority of value and relevance to social analysis, lay and professional, of studies of struture practitioners of analytic sociology and ethnomethodology see eye to eye. They agree that the practical objectivity and practical observability of ordinary activities so lends itself to inquiry that if certains methods are used (1) the objectivity of ordinary affairs shows itselds to be demostrably repeatable, repeating, uniform, standardized; (2) these features of the practical objectivity of everday activities are demostrably indepentent of the local cohort of staff</page>